Challenge: HIST 368 has a challenge for credit option.

Faculty: Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences

Overview

The course begins by tracing developments in the Americas before the arrival of the Europeans. Issues explored here include the diversity among and the elements common to First Nations societies, the religious beliefs of the first peoples, gender roles, relations among First Nations, and the causes of change in the organization of these societies over time. The course then traces the patterns of European-First Nations relations during the first three hundred years of continuous European involvement in the Americas. It also examines the impact of dealings with the Europeans on the social structure of various First Nations.

Outline

- Unit 1: Indigenous Canada
- Unit 2: Enter Europeans
- Unit 3: Indigenous Peoples and “British North America”

Learning outcomes

1. Identify patterns of continuity and change in Indigenous ways of life from earliest times to 1830.
2. Explain major events and trends in Indigenous histories from earliest times to 1830 by recalling narratives, arguments, and detailed examples from the course-assigned reading material.
3. Investigate how and to what ends knowledge about pre-Contact Indigenous peoples is (and has been) created, as well as how that knowledge has been (and continues to be) challenged and revised over time.
4. Describe the complex nature of relationships among different Indigenous groups from earliest times to 1830, as well as between Indigenous and non-Indigenous peoples from Contact to 1830.

Evaluation

To receive credit ↗ for HIST 368, you must successfully complete the two
