Overview

The Sociology of Work and Industry is a three-credit, senior-level course. The focus of this course is work: how it developed into its present forms; how it is organized; how individuals experience it; and the social relationships and institutional frameworks so essential for it to occur.

By critically examining key concepts, theories, and research findings in the sociology of work and industry, the course provides students with a deeper understanding of the dynamics of change and continuity, the basis for cooperation and conflict, and the varieties of human experiences in the world of work.

Outline

- Unit 1: Getting Started—Definitions, History, and Theories of Work
- Unit 2: Looking for Work—Diversity, Inequalities, and Insecurities in Canadian Labour Markets
- Unit 3: Doing Paid and Unpaid Work—Household Production, Gender, and Caring Work
- Unit 4: Managing Workers—Nice Words, Little Cooperation, and Lots of Control
- Unit 5: Limiting Management Control, Alienation, and Stress—Unions and Alternative Forms of Economic Organization

Learning outcomes

After completing this course, students should be able to:

- describe employment trends in Canada,
- explain the fragmentation of labour markets,
- give reasons why labour markets produce inequalities and insecurities,
- discuss the relations between paid and unpaid work,
- explain what management has to do with conflict and control in the workplace, and
- propose strategies to make work more equal, secure, and self-determined.
