Overview

Women and Unions is about women’s paid and unpaid work. It is about women’s struggles against the gendered division of labour, and the discrimination and exclusion that come with it. It is also about women’s struggles against employers who take advantage of women’s subordinate position in labour markets and about the fight that union sisters had, and still have, inside the labour movement to be heard and recognized as equals by their union brothers. The main focus of this course is on women and unions in Canada, but it also puts women’s struggles into a historical and global perspective.

Outline

- Unit 1: Introduction—What Is “Women and Unions” About and Why Study the Topic?
- Unit 2: “A Change Is Gonna Come”—Transformations of Work in Postwar Canada and the Making of a New Women’s Movement
- Unit 3: “Union Maids”—Equity Struggles and Union Renewal
- Unit 4: “At the Purchasers’ Option”—Unions, Housework, and Globalization
